CHICAGO MOM BIRTH

She keeps stillborn organism in jar of formaldehyde!

MOM and her stillborn child. Mrs. Kelborg keeps the eyeball in a jar because she says she has bonded with it, like any mother would with her own baby.

SALLY CARRUBBA
Special correspondent

Tragic mum Teresa Kelborg went through nine long months of her first pregnancy — and then gave birth to a giant eyeball!

The 47-year-old Chicago woman is so distraught over the bizarre birth that doctors have allowed her to keep the 7-pound eyeball, which she has taken home and treats like a living infant.

"I know it's only a lifeless thing, but it's flesh of my flesh," says Mrs. Kelborg, who has been on medical disability since the traumatic birth last September. "And when they laid it in my arms, I bonded with it — just like it was a baby.

"I have wanted to have a child for years and this was such a disappointment to me. The doctors say it's okay if I take care of it for awhile, in fact they say it's good for me to do so. I treat it as if it were my baby and it eases my grief."

Mrs. Kelborg, who with her husband has been trying to have a baby for 16 years, thought her dreams had finally come true when she found out she was expecting last winter.

The delighted mom-to-be bought everything for her baby's nursery, painted the room a lovely pastel green and bought tiny sleepers, booties and nightgowns for her new child.

Her pregnancy seemed to progress normally, although doctors were slightly concerned at the baby's lack of movement.

Mrs. Kelborg steadfastly refused all routine sonograms for fear of injuring the fetus, but she was confident that her baby was okay. But when HUGE eyeball was undetected in Mrs. Kelberg's womb because she refused to have ultrasound tests during the pregnancy.

Mrs. Kelberg went into labor on September 23, doctors soon knew something was awry.

The labor progressed unusually rapidly and it was impossible to find a fetal heartbeat.

Only a half hour after strong contractions had begun, the "baby" was born in a flushed delivery room.

Doctors and nurses were stunned to see that the new arrival was, in fact, an eyeball and that as soon as it was detached from Mrs. Kelberg's body it no longer had a pulse or blood circulation.

"They told me it wasn't living, but I begged to hold it," Mrs. Kelberg recalls.

"And the minute I touched it, it was like holding my own child. I don't know why, but I just felt so close to it."

Doctors have encouraged the heartbroken mom to treat the eyeball like a child so she can work out her grief. She has taken it home with her, preserved in a jar of formaldehyde.

"Of course I know it isn't a baby, but having it near me soothes me," the disappointed woman says.

"My husband and I have agreed that we will bury the little one two weeks from tomorrow.

"By that time I hope I can accept what has happened to me. Then I can get on with my life."

STUDY: HUBBY STILL THE BOSS!

Women have no more equality within the family now than they did years ago, a myth-shattering new study shows.

"The husband is still in charge, he's still making most of the important decisions in the family, and he's leaving the housework and child care to his wife," says top sociologist Maiselluna Salnovacz.

After evaluating scores of family surveys taken over the last 30 years, Salnovacz concluded that the only significant change in women's roles has come in the labor force. Woman's participation there is far greater now than before and working is acceptable for mothers and wives. "But in other areas, things remain what people are saying about sex roles, they're supporting the husband's authority at home," Salnovacz said. "One recent survey showed 84 percent of wives agreeing that 'the husband should be the head of the family.'

"People say they believe in dividing the housework, child care and sharing decision-making — but they do the opposite of what they

Man sues dating service that sent him a 250-lb. woman!

Lonely Edstel Smith says a dating service promised him a young beauty queen — and then delivered a 250-pound ball of blubber "I wouldn't have gone out with if they had paid me."

The 33-year-old Albertville, Ala., businessman wants his money back plus $250,000 in damages from Matchmaker International, claiming they didn't live up to their end of the bargain.

"I told them I was interested in a serious relationship with a woman between 29 and 37 who didn't smoke or drink," he told Weekly World News.

"SHE'S TOO FAT FOR ME!"

"For the $1,195 I paid, they were supposed to send me one woman a month for 24 months." But when the hefty 250-pounder showed up for the first date, Smith was flabbergasted. "She was a nice enough lady and not bad looking, but she appeared to be pregnant," he said. "When I complained, they didn't send any more women around and wouldn't refund my money.

"I keep myself trim and I'm looking for the same thing in a lady."

Matchmaker owner Lou Paravate disputed Smith's claims.

"We are an introduction service. We do not have an actual commodity that a person purchases," he said.

Smith was described as a really conservative guy by his lawyer, Jack Daniel. "He got irritated because they would not do what they said they would do. Then, he simply wanted his money back," Daniel explained.

Mugging victim meets suspect in hospital

A mugging victim staggered to an emergency room to get his injuries treated — and came face-to-face with the man who robbed him!

The victim, a teenage boy who asked to remain unonymous, identified 19-year-old Jose Rios as the man who attempted to rob him at gunpoint in a New York City subway station.

Rios was arrested by Transit Police Officer Thomas Devine.

"They struggled for a while and Rios reportedly pistol-whipped the victim. According to reports, when the youth refused to give Rios his money, the bandit hit him with the gun.

"At that point the kid pulls out a knife and stabs the suspect in the leg," explained Transit Detective Thomas Devine.

"They struggled for a while and Rios reportedly pistol-whipped the boy in the head and body. The gun dropped to the floor and off the two of them go in different directions," Devine continued.

Then they both turned up at the same hospital for treatment.

"The victim walked past the room where the suspect was being treated and recognized the man," said another Transit detective, Sgt. Sherif Ali.

The alleged crook was promptly arrested.

No charges have been filed against the younger teenager. "It's the Bronx," said Devine. "He was probably just carrying the knife for protection."

Scientists predict planet will be out of solar system by year 2002

EARTH IS SPINNING OUT OF ORBIT!

By NEIL TANNER Correspondent

Scientists say the Earth is getting too heavy to stay in orbit around the sun — and has already started to spin out of control!

In an updated report to the Academy of Sciences in Moscow, Drs. Alexei Nikanov and Dmitri Kharlamov say our doomed planet will be totally out of our solar system by the year 2002 — at the latest.

The respected space experts blame the planet's weight on the estimated 60,000 tons of space debris that rains down on us each year.

They also have little hope mankind can stop or divert the enormous flow of meteorites and dust before the Earth totally breaks free of the sun's gravitational pull — killing us all.

"The future of the Earth and mankind is in peril and we're powerless to do anything about it," Drs. Kharlamov and Nikanov said in their first report in May 1990.

"According to our calculations the planet is already showing signs of being too heavy to maintain its orbit."

touched off a storm of controversy that may not be resolved for years to come.

Many other experts, including famed French astrophysicist Jean-Pierre Lambert, agreed that cosmic debris is making the Earth heavier by the day.

But they believe that it will take 25 to 30 years before the additional weight threatens the solar system and the Earth's orbit around the sun.

"We've got time to do something about it," said Dr. Lambert. "The use of laser weapons to incinerate meteors before they enter the Earth's atmosphere is just one possibility that's being investigated right now."

Drs. Kharlamov and Nikanov are aware of the perspectives that Earth is 25 to 30 years from an orbital crisis. But they stand behind their position that we will be out of orbit by the year 2002 at the latest.

"It is a doomsday prediction but an accurate one," the re-

MOM Debbie Felton says her son was a good boy until the ghost came along.

GANGSTER GHOST TURNED OUR KID INTO A JUNIOR AL CAPONE

By JOE BERGER / Staff writer

Shuttered dad Harrison Felton and his family fled their dream home in tears after their lives were torn apart — by a gruff-talking, gun-toting gangster ghost!

The cigar-chomping spook showed up at Harrison's house in July and made himself right at home, slurping his beer, scarfing his food — and teaching this little boy to cheat, chisel and steal.

We were watching TV one night when suddenly there he was ... like something out of a James Cagney movie!

—Harrison Felton

"The guy never tried to hurt us, but he was just always there, lurking around in his old-fashioned mobster suit — yukking, changing the channel on the TV and eating everything he could get his hands on," the bewildered businessman told reporters. "But the main thing was, our 10-year-old son Bobby thought he was a hero and he turned the kid into a baby gangster," said Felton.

His wife added, "Bobby was a real good boy before that clown moved in, but before long he was getting sent home from school for extorting money from other kids, swindling them out of their lunch money, all kinds of stuff like that."

The pistol packing apparition arrived on the scene just days after the unsuspecting Feltons moved into a stately 70-year-old house in suburban Chicago.

"Debbie and Bobby and I were watching TV one night when suddenly there he was, standing around like something out a James Cagney movie," revealed flabbergasted Harrison, 39. "None of us had ever seen a ghost before, but we knew we were seeing one then because you could look and he was staying 'cause the feds had shot him down in that very house back in 1928 and he'd been there ever since. Then he flashed his 'piece' and started bragging about the old days when he was one of Scarface Capone's boys and you couldn't get a drink in Chicago without his permission.

"For a ghoul he was the world's biggest blowhard."

And from that day on, the smoking phantom swaggered in and out at will, spellbinding Bobby with tales of gangsters and crimes — and turning hapless Harrison into a nervous wreck.

"We'd be having dinner and suddenly he'd just be there, asking us to pass the mashed potatoes," said the troubled hubby. "Or Debbie and I'd be making love and suddenly he'd be sitting on the edge of the bed, watching us and smiling.

MOST WOMEN ARE PSYCHIC — and can even predict exactly how their hubbies will die!

Many women are born with an eerie sixth sense that enables them to foresee the way their husbands will die months or years in advance, a leading Japanese researcher reports.

Dr. Saji Otani surveyed more than 2,000 widows and found that 54 percent of them had previously had visions or dreams that accurately predicted how their husbands would die.

Most of the women paid no attention to their visions or forgot them as time went by.

"But the memories came flooding back when their husbands did, in fact, die," the Tokyo-based psychologist told a press conference.

"We have known for a long time that women are more intuitive than men but we attributed that to the way they are reared," he added.

"Now for the first time we have evidence to suggest that many of them really do have a sixth psychic sense."

Dr. Otani was at a loss to explain why women foresee their husbands' deaths and not those of other close relatives, such as their parents or kids.

"Hopefully we'll find some clues as we continue to sift through the findings of the survey," he said.

A 38-year-old widow who participated in the expert's study provided one of the most sensational examples of the strange psychic ability women seem to possess.

"On her wedding night she had a terrible nightmare in which she saw her husband fall from a towering skyscraper," said Dr. Otani. "Even more intriguing, in the dream he appeared to be very old.

"Seventeen years later her husband was diagnosed as being prematurely senile with Alzheimer's disease. A few months after that he wandered out onto the balcony of their high-rise apartment and toppled over the railing to his death."

Other dynamic examples:

● A 41-year-old woman had a recurring dream that her husband would die in a fishing accident. In fact, he slipped in a stream while fishing, hit his head on a rock and drowned.

● A 48-year-old woman foresaw the deaths of her first and second husbands in frightening visions. One died in an automobile accident and the other perished in a plane crash just as her visions predicted.

● A 54-year-old housewife dreamed that her husband would be killed in a street fight two days before he was knifed

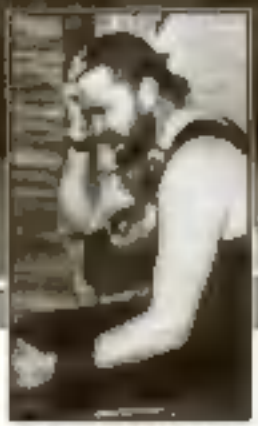
DAD PHOTOGRAPHS CROC KILLING GIRL...

MOMENTS TO LIVE. Sheila Alan struggles desperately as huge crocodile grabs her.



DAD Mark Alan bursts into tears shortly after the tragedy in April 1990

...and now he's charged with MURDER!

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania — Photographer Mark Alan took his daughter for a swim — and snapped a picture so horrifying that he may go to jail for it!

The Australian-born dad caught the dying moments of 11-year-old Sheila Alan as the child was being attacked and devoured by a giant crocodile. His shocking photo sold for a fortune worldwide, and was published in scores of magazines and newspapers, including Weekly World News.

But the shocking picture stirred up outrage, and now, WWN readers joined thousands of irate people who sent letters demanding that Alan be held accountable for taking the picture instead of going to the aid of his daughter.

Last month a criminal prosecutor in Tanzania, where the tragedy occurred in April 1990, charged the photographer with negligent homicide for not trying to save the child.

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

"There was no way I could have saved her," Alan testified at the preliminary hearing. "Everything happened in just a matter of seconds.

"And I did not take the picture on purpose. That's a terrible thought. I took the picture by accident as I panicked at the sight of the attack."

Little Sheila's gruesome death occurred while she and her father were visiting a freshwater spring 124 miles from their home here in Dar es Salaam. Alan decided to take gear to photograph submerged hippos at the spring while his daughter sunbathed and swam nearby.

Suddenly the photographer saw his daughter plunge from the surface and swim frantically down toward his position on the bottom of the spring. Alan says he looked up to see her just inches from the jaws of a monster crocodile.

"Her eyes were wide open and filled with terror and she was desperately trying to swim toward me," he recalled. "I noticed that the bottom of her bikini was gone and I couldn't understand why. Then I saw the croc.

"It had moved right up behind her. It was enormous . . . maybe 20 feet long. I watched, paralyzed with horror, as it opened its jaws, snapped them shut on Sheila's body and swam off with her pinned in those jaws. I didn't know it at the time, but I must have pressed the camera's shutter release just as the croc was about to grab her."

Reacting to public opinion, prosecutor Gutere Mberoge insists that Alan's guilt is proof the father was negligent in his daughter's death and believes he should face up to 20 years in prison for manslaughter. A criminal court judge has agreed to hear the case and Alan, 47, is presently in jail awaiting trial.

OOPS! Wasp sting makes barber slash man's throat!

Village barber Gino Pietri was arrested and charged with manslaughter after he was stung by a wasp while shaving a man — and accidentally slashed his customer's throat.

The 55-year-old father of five tried to stop his victim's bleeding, but the man's jugular vein had been severed. Fatally injured businessman Salvatore D'Orsoni, 42, died within minutes.

"He died to death before I could save him," the distraught barber said in a statement at his preliminary hearing before a Naples, Italy, criminal court. "I did everything I could to stop the blood, but it came pouring out of the wound. It was a nightmare — I'm just so upset."

According to an attorney for Pietri, the tragic incident took place in Pietri's barber shop. The day was unusually warm and Pietri had left his shop door open while he was shaving D'Orsoni, owner of a clothing store.

The barber had lathered up his customer and was preparing to shave him when he felt an insect crawling up his left trouser leg. When he shook his leg to dislodge the bug, he felt the excruciating pain of a wasp sting on his calf.

"I was working on the underside of Mr. D'Orsoni's chin and the bite took me by surprise," Pietri testified. "I must have jumped or started or something. I dropped the razor and slapped at the wasp and killed it.

"I then looked up and saw Mr. D'Orsoni clutching his throat, with blood spurting out everywhere. That's when I realized I had cut the man on the neck. I couldn't believe it — I had sliced open his throat!"

While other customers in the shop dashed for help, Pietri desperately tried to save the dying man, but D'Orsoni was dead by the time emergency workers arrived.

The barber was arrested in connection with the death, but authorities say that he will be released once they have taken witnesses' statements.

Bars serve cocktails made of real human BLOOD

COMFESSED vampire Gilu Aoki is the most popular bartender in Spain.

... AND THERE'S ONE COMING TO YOUR TOWN SOON!

By ALEX MORGAN, Correspondent

A seedy saloon called The Spanish Main was on the brink of bankruptcy until frantic owners hired an honest-to-goodness vampire to tend bar — and began serving cocktails made with real human blood!

Now the Bilbao, Spain, bar has met with such success that the same owners who feared they were going out of business plan to open a chain of the bars in the United States.

"We plan to start out in New York, Dallas, Miami and maybe Los Angeles," bar-owner Oswald Ramsy said. "Then we'll branch out to cities coast to coast.

"If we do half as much business in the U.S. as we do in Spain, we'll be a huge success."

Since Weekly World News first reported on The Spanish Main in June of 1991 business has been booming.

The tavern had been just another waterfront watering hole until late last year, when admitted vampire Gilu Aoki became the life's blood of the business.

"This place was like a tomb most of the time and we were about to go belly up," said Ramsy, who hired the drink-mixing vampire.

"Then Gilu came around looking for a job and it was like a gift from heaven."

Aoki had made headlines in Bilbao prior to his arrival at the bar when he confessed to a grisly vampire murder — and confessed that he, too, had sucked the blood of humans.

"All of a sudden we had a notorious vampire wanting to work for us, so we jumped at the chance," Ramsy recalled. "We thought it would be great to have our vampire bartender make drinks with human blood.

"We never dreamed anybody would ever want to drink one.

"But somehow the word got out that our blood cocktails were delicious and would do wonders for a person's sex life — and the rest is history.

"The drinks are rather expensive — most just cover the cost of the blood — but quickly as Gilu can make them," Ramsy said.

Now Ramsy has recruited some of Aoki's "friends" as bartenders and plans to launch his first U.S. bar by early 1993.

Ramsy has been warned that American health officials might not allow him to sell cocktails made with human blood.

"If they tell me to quit serving them, I'll fight it tooth and nail," he said. "I don't tell them how to run their business and I'm not going to let them tell me how to run mine."

Meanwhile, Ramsy insists he has no idea where Aoki gets the blood for his hot-selling highballs.

"I asked once, but he didn't want to tell me," he said. "And he gave me such a strange look, I decided I'd never ask again."

How to pick the perfect psychic!

Everyone would love to have a personal psychic to reveal what the future holds. But how do you find a seer you can trust?

Experts offer these suggestions

- Ask around. Get referrals from friends and business associates who have found a psychic
- Get as much information as you can. Don't be afraid to ask a psychic for a list of references
- Be aware of anyone who immediately tells you you're cursed or the diamond ring they're wearing is the source of all your problems. Some psychics are unscrupulous
- Don't cling to a psychic at psychic fairs. The psychics who do will keep people at the tables are inexperienced
- Always ask what it's going to cost before you make an appointment. A visit can cost anywhere from $5 to $400 – and you want to be sure you get your money's worth
- And remember ... you can always rely on free, sound, advice from famed NEWS psychic Serena Sabat

EXPERTS SAY JAPANESE MEN ARE WIMPS!

Psychologists studying Tokyo parks have revealed an astonishing fact: Japanese males aren't tough businessmen who work 16-hour days and drink all night ... they're really wimps mamma's boys!

Couples on park benches aren't holding hands or smooching, but most men can be seen there heads on their ladies' laps ... a certain sign

How to succeed at ANYTHING in six easy steps!

Will can develop iron-willed self-discipline that will help you succeed at anything, says an expert.

"Self-discipline is the single most important characteristic you need to succeed at anything you try," declared psychologist Dr. Edward Charlesworth. "It's the development of self-control, character organization and efficiency.

"And these six simple tips can help you develop self-discipline. It's really easier than you might think."

1. Never look back. "Often people assume past blunders will prevent future success, but the past won't affect the future unless you let it!" said Dr. Charlesworth.

2. Find a role model. "All the great people throughout history have had enormous self-discipline. As you study how they achieved their goals, and imitate their self-discipline, that self-discipline will become a part of you."

3. Learn to enjoy creative stress. "View problems as challenges you can overcome."

4. Develop concentration. "When distracting thoughts come to mind, say to yourself, 'Stop!' Then close your eyes and take a deep breath. Focus your energy on one thought."

5. Use positive thinking. "Put failure out of your mind and replace it with thoughts of success," said Dr. Charlesworth, co-author of the book Stress Management: A Comprehensive Guide to Wellness.

6. Don't try to be perfect. "Plan ways to succeed in small goals that you can accomplish, then reward yourself for taking each step."

GAYS BELONG IN THE ARMY, SEZ ED!

World's greatest military heroes were limp-wristed pansies!

I'm madder than Davy Crockett watching a Mexican hat dance at the Alamo over all this hullabaloo about gays serving in the military!

Why not give the sissy boys a shot, for crying out loud? I don't care if they wear pink uniforms and rollerskate to the front lines as long as they get there and plug a few of the enemy.

That military genius Alexander the Great was so gay he ditched real horse to ride a lavender saddle and rhinestone [illegible] and won battle after battle for Greece back in the old days.

And Germany's famed Red Baron was rumored to be so gay as a 13 hill. But did that stop him from becoming the greatest ace in flying history during World War I with 80 confirmed kills?

And while he was playing hell in the skies over Europe he even found time to set a fashion trend by being the first to wear those long silk scarves as an accessory to flying goggles and soft leather helmets.

GULP! Thief ate $500 diamond ring, say cops

Authorities got a search warrant to look for a stolen diamond ring — and used X-rays to spot the loot in the stomach of suspected thief Jerusa Jay Hughes!

Officers in Anthony, Okla., said Hughes, 31, admitted she had swallowed the ring, which was one of two expensive rings stolen from a pawnshop. But she would not let doctors remove the 3/4ct piece of jewelry. Officials say they got the ring a few days later when it passed through the suspect's body.

Big-time boozers were neglected as kids, says top doc!

Top specialists believe they have found a clue to why people become alcoholics — they weren't close enough to one of their parents when they were tots.

According to alcoholic treatment specialists Doctors Stan Gitlow and Lynne Hentschke, all of the more than 300 alcoholics that they have treated in the past 10 years were lacking a relationship with their same sex parent before the age of 5.

"They just can't identify with the parent of the same sex," Dr Hentschke told the Weekly World News.

"Either the parent was not around because he or she was dead or divorced or gone from the home, or the parent was there but not emotionally available to the child.

"The lack of attention deprived the child of a sense of his own identity.

"When the alcoholic becomes an adult, he has a terrific amount of confusion about who he is."

Dr Hentschke, a psychologist who treats alcoholics, says that alcoholics also have neurological differences which make them susceptible to heavy drinking. These, in combination with their family problems, lead them to abuse alcohol.

"For the most part their upbringing results in feelings of loneliness," Dr Hentschke explained.

"They feel they don't fit in anywhere. Somewhere along the line alcoholics learn that drinking makes them feel like everyone else.

"It makes them feel that they're okay. It gives them a sense of self.

"Letting an alcoholic know about these causes of his drinking helps him beat his problems," Dr Hentschke said.

An alcoholic is also encouraged to break down his feelings of isolation by joining AA or therapy groups so he can communicate his thoughts and share his problems with others.

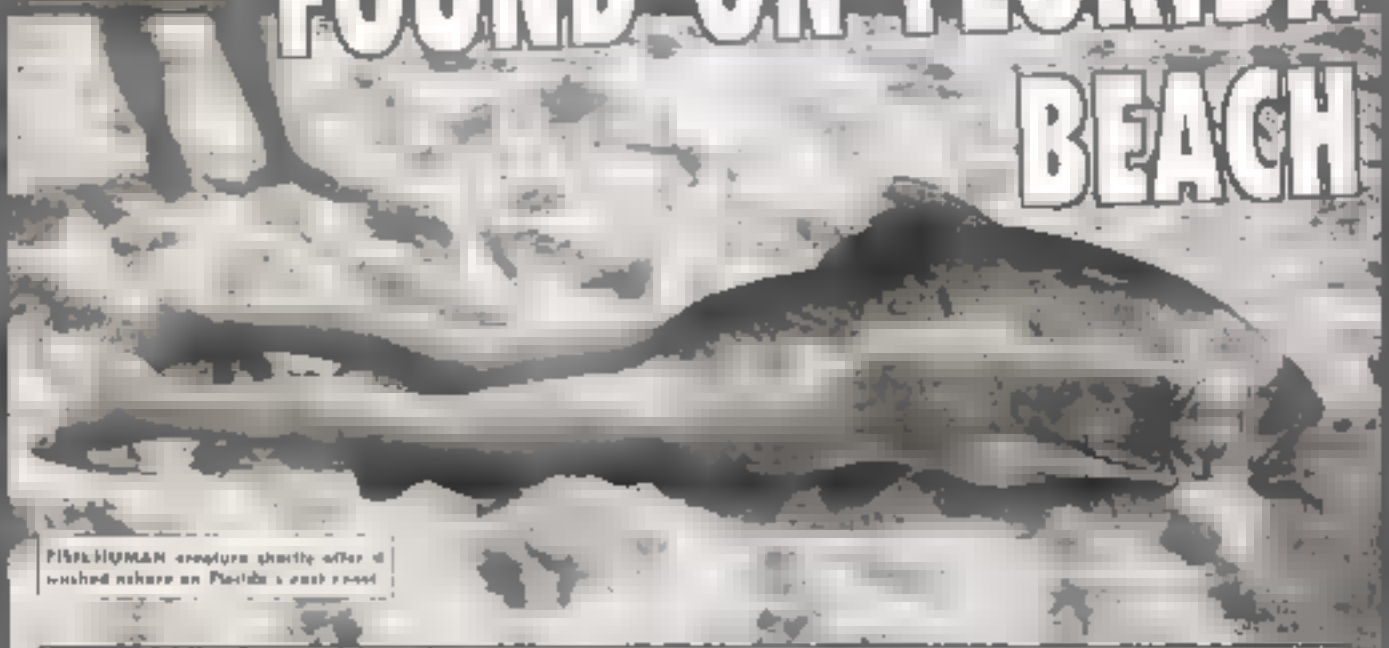
FISH WITH HUMAN LEGS FOUND ON FLORIDA BEACH



FISH/HUMAN creature shortly after it washed ashore on Florida's east coast

BIZARRE FREAK OF NATURE STUNS SCIENTISTS!

By BENJAMIN PEETS

A fish with human legs washed up on a Florida beach late last month and experts now say that hundreds or even thousands of similar creatures might be living in the sea!

Dr. Carr

That's the word from Dr. Richard Carr, a marine biologist who performed an autopsy on the fish and said that even though it appears to be a freak of nature, it had a fully developed female reproductive tract — and almost certainly gave birth to other creatures just like it.

"When this thing washed up on the beach some people, including police, thought they were being made the victims of a sick practical joke," the expert said in his report to lawmen in Jacksonville.

"But this fish isn't a joke," he continued. "This fish is real. And unless I miss my guess, a whole lot more of them are living in the sea than anyone has ever suspected."

Carr refused to comment on the exact location in order to avoid a media circus. But he confirmed that the tourists' screams attracted at least [illegible] before it washed ashore.

[illegible] that nobody was paying a penny for. But then [illegible] and started my office just in case. My passengers and I took the fish back to the laboratory and we were stunned by what we found.

Flesh removed from the creature's legs proved to be almost identical to the flesh of humans, the examiners found. But the presence of a waxy substance that protected the skin from contact with water [illegible]

"The body of the creature looks like a sea otter, and the internal organs were arranged in the fashion of an ordinary fish. The tongue [illegible] was slightly larger, but there is photographic proof that what you would expect to find in a fish, but we still have to take a much closer look at it before we'll be willing to say that the creature was smarter than your [illegible] fish.

"It was dead when it washed ashore, but we have not yet been able to determine the cause of death," he added.

"We did find a large fishing hook completely with a treble hook lodged in its stomach. But the hook is does not appear to have been the instrument of death," he said.

Carr and his team have petitioned the owners of the creatures while they renounce their analysis. They are also seeking grants to finance a search for other half-fish/half-humans, that may be in the area.

"We really don't know what kind of life forms exist under the sea," said the experts. "And I think it's time we found out."

Dear Hot Flash in Monroe: Have you considered suicide?

Dear Terrified in Atlanta: I'm not a criminologist, but I'll say the guy is trying to kill you!

Dear Revolting Gal in Gainesville: If all else fails close your eyes and pretend it's candy!

Dear Depressed in Pelican: Anybody who thinks of funerals as a spectator sport should be in the graveyard!

Dear Mad Dude in Glendale: I said women are EASY superior to men!

Dear Dotti: When my daughter was born she was the prettiest little thing you ever laid eyes on and during all the years she was growing up, I sometimes felt she was too good to be true.

All that changed when she started high school. She hooked up with a bad crowd and now she's dabbling with drugs — and flunking out of school. How can I get my daughter back on track? — Desperate in Hampton

Dear Desperate: The solution to your problem is to plant it on the back on my face. Ground your daughter for the rest of her natural life or until she cleans up her act — whichever comes first!

Breast-hating hubby is making a boob out of me!

Dear Dotti: You're not going to believe this but my husband wants me to have a double mastectomy, not because I have breast cancer — but because he doesn't like breasts. I'm not kidding, Dotti. The old fool is pressuring me to have my breasts removed just because he doesn't like to look at them. The very idea is terrifying to me. What should I do? — Concerned in Shreveport

Dear Concerned: If you're nuts, do what your husband asks. If you're not, get yourself a good divorce lawyer — and take him to court!

Why does the idiot box only offer us trash?

Dear Dotti: My children and I watch about 35 hours of television a week and I'm appalled at all the trash that's on night after night. Why can't the people who make these shows put something decent on the air? As it stands, people like me are forced to watch garbage because there's nothing else on the tube. — Channel in Danby

Dear Channel: Networks put trash on TV because boneheads like you are too stupid and lazy to turn off your sets. Get with it, pal! I unplugged my big screen four years ago — and if you're smart, you'll do the same!

My boyfriend's a peach but he stinks like a pig!

Dear Dotti: My boyfriend is a great guy but his underarms stink so bad that it's everything I can do to keep from gagging whenever we hug. I've asked him to use deodorant but he doesn't think he has a problem. How can I make him see the light? — Stunk Out in Singapore

Dear Stunk Out: The next time you [illegible] tell him you'll get the message instantly — personally guarantee it!

If my wife's a closet lesbo can I make her fess up?

Dear Dotti: I just got some information that makes me suspect that my wife of 11 years is a closet lesbian. I don't want to accuse her of anything. What should I do? — Puzzled in Baton Rouge

Dear Puzzled: Buy a girlie magazine, glue the centerfold together and leave it on the kitchen table when you go to work tomorrow morning. If the centerfold is torn apart when you get back home, your wife is CERTAINLY a lesbian!

Please help me, Serena. I need my car to get to work and back and I'm afraid someone is going to steal it. — Lost in Matthews

Dear Lost: If you didn't drink so much you wouldn't have problems like this. The car is parked in the dirt road that connects to the parking lot of the convenience store down the street from your house.

I desperately want to leave my husband and be with the second Marcel, but I can't make up my mind and need help — fast! Which Marcel should I choose? — Confused in Cleveland

Dear Confused: Choose the Marcels you are currently involved with, roll your head back and look at the ceiling. Whichever Marcel you see first is the one you should leave your husband for. Trust me on this one!

STRIAL INSECTS AT UFO LANDING SITE!

A leading researcher claims to have found a pair of space alien bugs at a UFO landing site — but here's the clincher:

Dr. Paul Farmer has strong reason to believe that other extraterrestrial bugs escaped from the starship and are now [illegible] like flies in the Arizona desert.

The insects look like flying crab claws and have powerful, crushing jaws that enable them to eat a variety of foods, including raw meat, bits of metal and other bugs.

Metal-eating creatures are as smart as dogs!

In spite of their alien appearance, the experts say they are as smart, loyal and obedient as dogs — and will make good pets.

[illegible] scientist overlooks the importance of this discovery," said Dr. [illegible] who captured the insects at a staged UFO landing site [illegible] in late October.

"The bugs that we have in captivity are not only growing by [illegible] hundreds more are laying [illegible] and as we can watch them [illegible] as a result is a fantastic opportunity to study alien life forms."

There was initial concern that the insects would wreak havoc with our environment and ecology, but my observations are proving otherwise.

The bugs do not appear to be destructive in any way, shape or form.

He captured the insects and took them back to his laboratory. Xray, CAT scans and other sophisticated tests showed them to have only one internal organ and no blood or body fluids at all.

"Their bodies are as hard as steel and the four, globular eyes they have at the middle of their heads literally give them 360-degree vision," said Farmer. "Even [illegible] the bugs are [illegible]

HERMAPHRODITE HAS A BABY!

Pretty mom is half-man half-woman but her new son is all boy!

By JOSEPHINE VONAUFF
Correspondent

Hermaphrodite actress Anna Maltrana is enjoying a new role these days — playing both mom and dad to her new baby Andre.

The 23-year-old brunette beauty from France has both male and female sex organs. She made herself pregnant early last year and her adorable infant son born September 21, normal in every way.

"They told me there was a chance he'd be both male and female, like I am," says hermaphrodite Anna, who is very female from the waist up and male from the waist down. "But he's all boy, a real little he-man. I'm so glad to be his parents."

The happy mom first made headlines in Weekly World News last April in a feature article describing her career as the hottest new actress in France.

A few months later she made news again when she revealed that her bizarre physical condition had led to an unexpected pregnancy.

"My body is such a mixture of male and female that I both produced an egg and fertilized it," she explained.

"I am complete enough in myself to produce my own offspring, which is a terrific advantage in this age of divorce.

"Now I'm both mom and dad to my baby. I can teach my child twice as much as the normal single parent can."

Anna, who has a womb and ovaries along with every normal male genitalia, had her baby by cesarean section.

She and her son went home from the hospital a week later and have settled in well.

Anna says she is now taking birth control pills so that she cannot make herself pregnant again, but she's considering repeating the baby-making process in a few years so that little Andre can have a sister or a brother.

"I enjoy having my son so much that having more babies is definitely on my plans for the future," Anna says.

"I have having a parent and I want to have a big happy family around me."

But plans for having another baby will have to be put on hold for a while — that the pretty actress can keep up on her career. Anna has retired from acting while her baby is small but when little Andre is a year old she wants to re-enter her work on television and films.

"Being different has given me a chance to be famous and I want to take advantage of that," the she-male says. "Being a hermaphrodite is a special gift from God. I would be foolish to waste it."

"I'm so glad to be Andre's parents," says happy Anna. "I'm so delighted he's mine."

OH Baby! Hermaphrodite mom Anna Maltrana and 3½-month-old son Andre.

Open a laundry in Red China & you'll clean up!

It's incredible but true — China is in need of laundries.

The shocking shortage is most evident in Beijing, which has only 43 laundries to serve a staggering 10 million people, reports Workers Daily newspaper.

The situation is so bad that it can take as long as two months to get back clean clothing, the newspaper said. Officials blame the cultural prejudice against working in the service trade.

Some report jobs as slaves and restaurants as evoked capitalism and others are eight private work stories in order to a daily

The economy is the pits, people all around you are getting laid off and your stress level is soaring out of sight. But not to panic — Charlotte, N.C., psychologist Wanda Webb has some tips that will help you cope:

- Do something during the week that's fun. Something you can look forward to.
- Devote Daily Inventories to yourself ... like, "Whose problem is this anyway?"

Ants attack woman's freeze-dried husband!

LOVING wife Harriet and freeze-dried Jack first appeared in the Weekly World News in February 1991. Other newspapers later covered the story.

By BEATRICE DEXTER, Entertainment Editor

Devoted wife Harriet Spencer had her husband freeze-dried after he died in 1991 so she could keep him with her forever. But her heartwarming gesture ran into problems this summer — when ants invaded her hubby's corpse and started carrying it away piece by piece!

The desperate widow discovered ants had crawled into the eyes, nose and mouth of Jack Spencer, who was freeze-dried by a Las Vegas dentist following his death from a heart attack.

The insects are causing no trouble. In fact, the dead man's lack of a pulse is a fact which has Harriet very upset.

"Jack was everything in this world to me and I found a way to keep him always with me," said the Phoenix, Ariz., widow, 49. "With his freeze-dried body in my home, it's almost as if he is still alive.

"But now these bugs are doing what death could never do. They're threatening to take away the only comfort I have left. I'll be willing to do anything to get those disgusting creatures out of Jack."

Harriet said her husband agreed years ago that whoever died first would be freeze-dried in a special vacuum chamber that removes water from tissues and preserves flesh for up to 100 years.

When Jack died last year, his body was sent to a laboratory and was quickly put to sleep. He came back looking as natural as life. He had been freeze-dried to a seated position, his legs crossed and his hands folded on his knee. He lost his favorite pipe and his glasses just as though he were alive.

"I can carry him around because the freeze-dry process reduced his weight to only 20 pounds," she said. "I keep him in the bedroom at night.

"His presence was a terrific consolation to me — until last summer."

Harriet says she awoke one July morning to see a trail of black ants crawling through a crack in the windowsill, down the bedroom wall and up on Jack's body.

"I was watching TV or was in the bedroom at night.

"His presence was a terrific consolation to me — until last summer."

Harriet says she awoke one July morning to see a trail of black ants crawling through a crack in the windowsill, down the bedroom wall and up on Jack's body.

"They've started. I've tried pinching off morsels of her hubby's freeze-dried body and carrying it away to their nest.

The widow sprayed Jack from top to bottom — but the ant attack stopped only for a few hours. Soon the bugs were back and Jack's body was under siege again.

"Since it started, I've tried pouring boiling water on them. I've sprayed them with insecticide, I've sleeped on them, I've put poison out.

"I have tried to move Jack away from there every time the pals show up, but I can't let Jack sit anywhere for more than 20 minutes before the things start at it by the hun-

Spinster locks 2 door-to-door preachers in cellar . . . for 3 days!

By RICK TRACY
Correspondent

Feisty spinster Mae Browner got a bellyful of soul-saving Jehovah's Witnesses knocking on her front door — and locked two of them up in her basement for three days.

"I'm a good Christian woman who reads the Bible and goes to church on Sundays," the 67-year-old widow told cops.

"I don't need these people running around here bothering me while I'm enjoying my TV."

Mae was quietly watching one of her favorite soaps a week earlier when the doorbell rang.

"A man and a younger woman — Jehovah's Witnesses — were standing there. They handed me a religious pamphlet. I told them I was busy watching TV but they kept on yapping. They just wouldn't shut up. That's when I decided to fix their wagon."

The crafty spinster lured them into her basement on the pretext that she was having trouble with the thermostat on her furnace. Once they were inside, Mae slammed the basement door shut and locked it.

"They pounded on the door for a while until I explained they were going to be my special guests for a few days. They must have thought I was some sort of crazy lady, 'cause they finally quieted down."

The [illegible] waited until the Watch-tower bible [illegible] were both "guests" were asleep and played two ice cubes filled with food and soft drinks on the basement of her home in Glasgow, Scotland.

"I wanted them to be as comfortable as possible while they were in my house," she explained. "I didn't want them to bother any of my neighbors."

Mae's unwilling housequests were midway through their third day in the basement when two more witnesses up at her front door.

MAE BROWNER

The Jehovah's Witnesses had been observed entering by other members of the organization. They were last seen in Mae's neighborhood.

Mae stunned the officers by admitting the two missing people were in her basement. Police unlocked the basement door and let them out.

"They didn't preach about saving my soul while they were locked up," Mae told police. "I know what I did was wrong, but they have no business bothering folks."

The two Jehovah's Witnesses declined to press charges against Mae, who was allowed to go home after agreeing to [illegible]

VIRGINS DIE HAVING SEX!

Married couple had waited 16 years to make love

Two shy virgins waited 16 years to consummate their marriage in one night of mad passion — and they got so excited they both died of heart attacks!

Tommy Tony and Theresa Templeton were found wrapped in each other's arms in the bedroom of their apartment in Caracas, Venezuela, where they taught high school English.

"They waited so long for the special night in their lives and when it finally came they got carried away and overdid it. I guess they were trying to make up for lost time," said a close friend.

A medical examiner said the couple died of cardiac arrest although neither had a history of heart problems. But even more astonishing, both died at

Tony and Theresa, both 41, spent high school sweethearts — which soared here from the [illegible] West.

"They were bashful and withdrawn around strangers but seemed to feel comfortable with each other. I doubt if the word sex was ever a part of their vocabulary," said a neighbor. "They never kissed or hugged in public but occasionally we held hands."

Though well liked and respected, the couple had few close friends.

They occasionally went to the movies or picnicked in the park, but never went to bars and didn't drink or smoke.

Their sweet, innocent love seemed quite idyllic to outsiders — but they were driven to [illegible] by [illegible] need to be in control. They had a passionate [illegible] and [illegible] a mother.

[illegible] on their part [illegible] Tony and Theresa had years of [illegible] in their marriage. It's [illegible] they died while making love.

"I'll never get over it."

HIGH SCHOOL SWEETHEARTS: Theresa and Tony Templeton led a quiet life. The shy pair "never kissed or hugged in public, but occasionally held hands," said a neighbor.

AIDS-cure tree chopped down

A scientist thought he'd found a valuable chemical in the war against AIDS in the sap of a rare tree. But when he returned for more samples, the tree had been chopped down and carted away!

Botanist [illegible] Soejarto discovered the tree while trekking through the rain forests of Malaysia.

The compound was tested at the National Cancer Institute which pays for Soejarto's research.

"If we lower these plants, we will decrease our odds of discovering potentially useful drugs that these plants may offer," he said. "Once lost, they are lost forever."

The anti-AIDS chemical found in the sap was Calanolide A, which could stop the growth of HIV 1, the viral strain responsible for most cases of AIDS.

"This is not another run-of-the-mill screening lead. It's a very intriguing development," said the center's Dr. Michael Boyd.

Coming soon: Microwave ovens that'll dry your clothes

Within three years busy housewives will be able to dry a load of wet laundry in a jiffy — by popping it into a microwave oven!

The microwave dryer will heat up the water-soaked garments in just the [illegible] clothes that you usually can't do in a conventional dryer," said John Hamming of the Electric Power Research Institute in Los Angeles, Calif.

A regular dryer heats the air inside the dryer.

Temperatures can reach 200 degrees, which weakens the fabric. The microwave dryer heats clothes to 140 degrees.

"We have done testing on silk and wool and it works fine on them. For cotton, there won't be any shrinkage."

Crackpot inventor builds bed-of-nails toilet seat!

OUCH!

By JOE BERGER
Staff Writer

Dingbat businessman Lirael Pas is peddling a crackpot bathroom accessory designed only for hard-bottomed weirdos — a toilet seat adorned with dozens of spine-chilling spikes.

"I admit the market for this item might be somewhat limited right now because it takes a kind of hardy toilet seat to definitely not for everyone," the idiot inventor told reporters in New Delhi, India.

"But this country has thousands of holy men who eagerly walk on red hot coals and stick needles through their tongues to demonstrate their faith.

"What better way for them to test their inner strength than to sit on something like this every morning?"

Ding-a-ling Lirael unveiled his blood-curdling contraption at a trade show in New Delhi as hundreds of bewildered fellow businessmen gaped in disbelief. "I guess the guy in charge is subject to make decisions of that kind," — but for the life of me, I don't see how," gasped flabbergasted merchant Madhava Kapoor.

He tried to persuade me to sell it in my hardware store, but I told him if I put something like that on my shelves, my customers would laugh me out of business.

The last I heard, the moron hadn't sold a single one to anybody — and that doesn't surprise me a bit."

Still, today-tuned Lirael insists the world's most terrifying toilet seat is destined to become standard equipment in the homes of holy men and goofy gurus all around the globe.

"It may take a bit of time, but this thing is going to catch on like wildfire," said the sick [illegible] "These yogis are very competitive and when every guru out there has a spike seat everybody is going to want a spike seat.

"And they're perfect for every decor. The spikes come in six different colors."

WOULD-BE buyer Lirael Pas shows off one of his bed-of-nails toilet seats. "It's the perfect bathroom accessory for every demon," says the goofy inventor from New Delhi, India. "Because the spikes come in six different colors."

Terrible Tawser's ill-nasty ways terrorize fearless stalking distillery workers and visitors.

Dad mails death threats — to get his daughter to quit cheerleading!

By JACK ALEXANDER Staff writer

A down-and-out dad tried to get his pretty teenage daughter kicked off the cheerleading squad by mailing anonymous letters — saying she was going to be killed!

"He wanted his daughter to quit the cheerleading squad because it was putting a strain on his pocketbook," said James Arehart of the U.S. attorney's office in Lexington, Ky.

Businessman Dennis Lee Dean had mailed one of the anonymous letters to his father-in-law [illegible] parents of eight or girls on the cheerleading squad and other letters to himself and his wife.

DOAH

"All of the letters said Dean's 14-year-old daughter, Jennie, a cheerleader at Harrison High School, would be killed if she didn't quit or get kicked off the cheerleading squad," Arehart said.

CUTE AS A BUTTON Jennie Dean was happily posing as a cheerleader before her mom's scheme started

Dean, 38, pleaded guilty in a federal court in Lexington to a charge of threatening communications and is awaiting sentencing. He could get up to five years in prison, but likely will get a six-months to a year sentence.

"He was desperate because he couldn't afford what it was costing to keep his pretty young daughter on the cheerleading squad," said Arehart.

"He thought the letters would force his daughter to leave the team and solve his financial problems. He has since made peace with his daughter and other members of his family."

College student goes to class stark naked — every day!

By ROCK TRACEY Campus editor

A stubborn college kid who dares to be different has University of California bigwigs in a stew because he goes to class — stark naked.

"A couple of times he wore nothing but a bandanna on his head. Twice he strolled on campus wearing only a pair of shoes," said campus security Lt. Bill Foley.

Try as they may, neither police nor campus security can [illegible] Andrew Mariner, 19, [illegible] twice for indecent exposure on campus and once when he showed up in court naked.

Incredibly, the district attorney in Berkeley dropped the indecent exposure counts because Mariner's behavior didn't qualify as lewd and lascivious under California law.

Berkeley doesn't have a law banning public nudity, but the [illegible] prosecute on campus. But some of that has stopped him.

Mariner sees nudity this way. "We're socialized to think that a lot of things are necessary in life, but I think it is completely useless to wear clothes. Nakedness isn't that big a deal. It's a body, we all have one."

THE NEW MACHO WOMAN

Are you one? Test yourself and see!

By HELEN RAMSEY special correspondent

If you're hard as nails on the outside, but weak and dependent on the inside, you may be the New Macho Woman — and you may need help.

According to psychotherapist Carolyn Hubbard, who together with Jill Scott of a book on the subject, the New Macho Woman drives people away by keeping up her defenses or dropping them to become a whining baby.

She appears to be a self-confident, aggressive and independent woman — but that's only because she secretly fears intimacy with anyone.

She's generally between the ages of 25 and 40. Like the macho men of years past, she refuses to acknowledge tenderness or emotion. She thinks she can handle things with no help.

She's lonely and unsatisfied but she can do something about it — by learning to be strong while still admitting her need for others.

In the following quiz designed by Dr. Hubbard, readers can determine whether she is the New Macho Woman. Answer each question with a yes or no and then check the score.

1. Do you fall for the wrong types of men? Macho women often have been involved in dependent men or men who enjoy getting into a power struggle with them.

2. Are you on the "Career Failure Road"? The New Macho Woman is both afraid to succeed and afraid to fail. She becomes a workaholic but at the same time she secretly fears that no man will love her if she becomes a big success in your career.

3. Do you overplan? Macho women tend to feel uncomfortable with time alone. They would rather be involved in many things, overbooking their schedules with things to do.

4. Do you do too much for your friends, then resent it?

WORLD RENOWNED bodybuilder Lenore Kandel of Holland

Part of a typical New Macho Woman problem is she likes to be needed and to step up and help out her friends.

5. Are you too much right? The New Macho Woman is the classic "right person." She has to be in control of the time. She makes rules for herself and others and wants everybody adhere to them.

6. Do you power up with a couple of beers? The New Macho Woman tends to be perfect and is vulnerable. She wears a mask that says "I am independent and I don't need anyone."

7. Other attempts to control your others behave they can't make you feel bad or hurt you.

If you answered "yes" to three or more of these questions, you may be too macho for your own good.

SMOKING IN BED COSTS MISER $300G

Cash-stuffed mattress goes up in flames!

By TONY CASLEDY

Miserly Andy Brewster's $300,000 life savings went up in smoke when he fell asleep while smoking in bed — and set fire to the mattress where he kept his fortune hidden!

It took 79 year old Andy a lifetime of scrimping and doing without to amass his $300,000 retirement nest egg. But his reckless cigarette reduced the fortune to ashes in a matter of seconds.

Luckily Andy suffered only minor burns in the fire that destroyed his home.

"Every cent I had in the world was in that mattress," the penny pinching retired scrap dealer said as he pawed through the charred rubble of his home on the outskirts of Atlanta, Ga. "I did something stupid — I smoked in bed. Now I have nothing.

"I knew smoking in bed wasn't smart. But I've done it all my life.

"I guess I pushed my luck too far and it almost cost me my life. It's a mistake I won't live to regret along with the money I worked so hard to save."

Andy said he never married, has never worked at a regular job and has never collected a penny of military money.

"I lived in what most people would call a dump, I guess. But I had no mortgage payments. I'm never paid a dime where my feet won't take me.

"I wore secondhand clothes and shoes, used candles and heated my shack with a wood-burning stove.

"I deprived myself of life's pleasures to save for my twilight years.

"All my life I scrimped and saved every penny I got and I had more money than I could possibly need to live out my life. But I lost it all in just a few seconds while I was in bed with a cigarette and fell asleep.

"It's so damned ironic. I even rolled my own cigarettes to save money!"

Groom DUMPS her — after she turns off TV monster flick

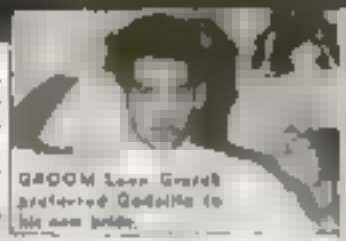
Newlywed Julia Gorek says her marriage went on the rocks only eight hours after she took her vows — because of the movie monster Godzilla!

The 31-year-old secretary and her husband Tom got in an argument on their wedding night in a hotel just outside Rockford, Ill., when Godzilla on the late Movie appeared on late night TV and he grew annoyed at her decision to watch it.

She took a real cold look at the groom she'd married and would change her mind. Then he left, saying he'd come back for the wedding presents — but filed for divorce in court. He humiliated me, he abandoned me. He never gave our marriage a chance."

Julia is determined to discuss her divorce action with reporters, and her attorney says his client was determined to end the marriage.

"He feels he should not be dictated to by his wife," the lawyer told reporters.



GROOM Tom Gorek preferred Godzilla to his new bride.

Julia says she became fuming mad when Tom refused to turn off the television set. In response, Tom packed his bags and walked out.

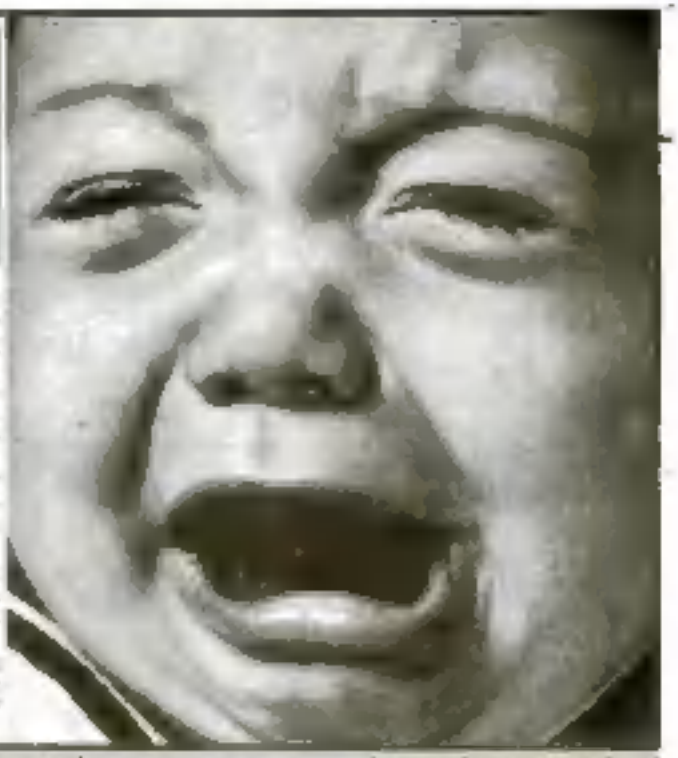
7 WAYS TO CALM A CRYING BABY



By JACK ALEXANDER / Staff writer

You say your crybaby kid howls all night and you can't sleep? You say it's breaking up your marriage? You say you'd like to strangle the little nipper? Listen up!

Before you go stark-raving mad and lose it, try these weird, wonderful and wacky ways to calm the screaming toddler.

✓Strap the baby in a car seat atop your washing machine. Hold on to the seat and turn the machine on. The vibration and sound will silence the kid in seconds. Switching on the vacuum cleaner also helps, mothers say.

✓Switch on some reggae tapes and boogie. The melodic repetitive beat acts like a tranquilizer.

✓Take the baby for a drive. The car's rocking movement will please him. Try to avoid streets with traffic lights because stopping and starting up again could wake him up.

✓Turn on the kitchen faucet and let the little brat play with the water. He will find watching and dabbling his fingers in the water to be fascinating.

✓Let the little squirt rip a glossy magazine to pieces. Chewing the pieces is also allowed if you don't let him swallow too much.

✓Place him in front of a mirror. He'll be so busy trying to figure out who he's looking at, he'll forget about crying.

✓Hold him upside down and rock him back and forth gently. Babies love to see the world upside down if only for a few seconds.

PAINTING COMES BURSTS

By BEATRICE DEXTER · Special Correspondent

Aaron Flushing and his family fled their home in the middle of the night — after a Norman Rockwell picture on their living room wall burst into song!

The suburban Philadelphia family refused to go back to their two-bedroom bungalow until a team of psychics entered the dwelling and removed the print from their wall. They say their terrifying experience convinced them ghosts exist and that they want no part of them!

"The figures in the picture were singing Heart of My Heart, Danny Boy and My Gal Sal," says Flushing, a free-lance alarm systems expert. "They were belting out the music like they were giving a performance. There was no way we could stay in that house with something so eerie going on. The picture was definitely haunted. We saw it with our own eyes."

Flushing, his wife Andrea and 6-year-old daughter Ann lived with the picture — Rockwell's Saturday Evening Post cover of a barbershop quartet — for more than six weeks before the print mysteriously came to life, the 34-year-old homeowner said.

They had purchased the framed print at a garage sale in Trenton, N.J., and had no idea what its history was.

"My wife thought it was real cute and she insisted it go on the living room wall, right by the sofa," he recalled. "Everybody complimented us on it.

"After a while we noticed the print would move itself on the wall, tilting to the right or left during the night. Then we began hearing singing at night.

"We thought it was the neighbors at first. It didn't dawn on us it was the picture until later."

Flushing says he and his wife discovered the picture was haunted one night in late October when the sound of loud singing awoke the couple from a sound sleep.

The panicked pair rushed downstairs to find out where the noise was coming from — and discovered that the barbershop quartet in their Rockwell print were singing at the top of their lungs right before their eyes.

"The men were moving, their mouths were moving and they were swaying to the beat of the music," Flushing said. "My wife was so scared she

SUPER POOCH IS WORLD'S BEST TERMITE INSPECTOR!

Stewart the super pooch is a hardworking exterminator trained to track down termites where no man dares to crawl.

The four-year-old beagle works a tough right beside a man for a Boston exterminating firm, sniffing out nasty termites wherever they might hide.

"He is never wrong," said Tim Johnston of Todd Termite Dogs, the company that trained Stewart and 28 other dogs to find the wood-chomping pests.

Stewart began training for his unusual job when he was just 8 months old. "If that puppy walks in and says there are termites, there are termites. That's all there is to it," says Johnson.

Robert Gutman, a California animal behaviorist and the president of Todd, came up with the idea of four-legged termite inspectors after he moved into a house that was infested with the bugs — even though the exterminators had given the place their seal of approval. Before deciding to train dogs for the task, Gutman had researched aardvarks, the long-snouted African animals that feed on ants and termites. "But it would have been tough to get homeowners to open their doors," he said.

Gutman has been training beagles to spot termites for the past five years. He believes that breed is perfectly suited for the tricky task of beating the destructive bugs. "Humans can see only about half the trouble spots," he said. "The rest of the work is for the dogs."

If Stewart hears or smells termites in a home he's inspecting, he stops and paws at the wood. And he'll follow the trail around the house.

But Stewart hunts termites only when he's on the job.

"When he's in a working mode, he wears a collar," Johnson said. "It's like putting on
